There is a common law duty to take the results of a consultation "conscientiously into account". Therefore the inspector must investigate the fact that building more houses than the required amount in Shropshire is incompatible with the government's legally binding commitments to tackle the climate emergency.

The additional proposed number of houses breaches the government's legally binding commitment to hit net zero carbon by 2050.

It is important that decisions of local authorities that have significant ramifications for the environment for years to come be taken in a free and fair manner, not dictated by central government as appears to have happened here.
