The church of St. Nicholas at Oldbury was originally built during the medieval period (1066-1547). However, the majority of the church dates from the 19th century. In 1858 the Rev. John Purton had some work carried out on the church. He was the rector of the parish for 49 years, until his death in 1883. The church was then enlarged in 1862 and re-seated in oak in 1898 in commemoration of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee
